Description:

GVHP implements a broad range of activities that focus on addressing the priorities of the Community Health Improvement Plan (CHIP) that are identified through the latest Community Health Assessment (CHA). These often include a variety of health topics, improving access to care and health service needs, preventing and managing chronic disease, and improving social and emotional health. Our vision is realized through facilitating collaboration among community partners, improving the health status of Livingston County residents, and coordinating, planning, and integrating resources.

The GVHP consists of a Board of Directors, an association of members, and committees focused on accomplishing specific objectives specified by the Board. The 40+ GVHP members collaborate to develop and implement solutions to health challenges facing the community. Member organizations represent hospitals, County government, human service organizations, primary and secondary educational institutions, private health care providers, health insurance companies, health education and prevention organizations, long term care providers, and local businesses.

Structure & Participation

The Genesee Valley Health Partnership serves as the convener and facilitator for health-related initiatives in Livingston County. GVHP provides planning and communication, program administration and support, data and resource development that increase members' collaborative capacities to address community needs. GVHP performs activities and fosters collaboration on issues identified in its annual workplan, approved by the New York State Office of Rural Health. This plan is devised around health service trends defined by local member organizations. As well as driven by the Community Health Assessment and Community Health Improvement Plan.

GVHP operates under a committee structure defined by current workplan priorities. Committees oversee the activities listed in the workplan, which are accomplished through subcommittees, or workgroups, specific to each activity. In some cases, workgroups are time limited. In other instances, ongoing workgroups coordinate and improve services in a particular area of rural health. Committees may additionally engage in projects or goals outside of the goals of the partnership.

GVHP currently functions through the following established committees:

- Be Well in Livingston
- Trauma-Informed Communities
- Suicide Prevention Task Force
